Monday 24th June 2019

In the aftermath of the financial crisis, many of those working in financial services started to question the meaning and impact of what they were doing and to explore ways of ensuring their investment analysis, decisions and actions would be more in tune with their values. Those in charge of investing in a variety of asset classes, including on behalf of family offices, pension funds, wealth managers, and endowments are faced with those questions and various responses have appeared, in the alternative sector as well as elsewhere.

The conference will be followed by drinks at the nearby Cinnamon Club.

This event is being held in collaboration with St Benet's Institute, Oxford
