

Berkeley, March 9th, 2023

Today we gave a Guest Lecture to MBA as well as Undergraduate students at Haas Business School, University of California, Berkeley, about Ethics in Financial Services. We explored various case studies, drew a line between pure Ethics and the written word, and we also looked at how different regulatory systems approach a given question differently.

We discussed the role of the compliance function, analyzed issues pertaining to a case of market abuse, touched upon the LIBOR fraud case, and talked about the increasing importance of regulation and how that has played out since the 2008 crisis.

Students actively participated, which made this session all the more pleasant and productive.

Thank you, Berkeley, for your invitation!
